19 HUNTER HARBOURSIDE

Story

A luxury two bedroom self contained apartment in the 'Drunken Admiral' building on Hunter Island, Hobart's birth place (1804). The site where Collins first stepped ashore (ten metres from the front door) and unloaded his stores. At low tide he walked from the island to the shoreline and thus Hobart was born. Infused with original artworks, (available for purchase) 19 Hunter Street is arguably Australia's most prestigious residential address. Situated next to the Henry Jones Art Hotel on Hobart's waterfront with views across the harbour to Mt Wellington, The Drunken Admiral building was built in 1826 as a storehouse for many of the imported goods brought to the town. It became an ordnance store, then barracks and later provided accommodation for soldier settlers and immigrants seeking a new life.

Today Hunter St is one of the most picturesque areas of Hobart. It includes hotels, bars and restaurants, the Tasmanian School of Art, as well as several art galleries with a wide variety of artwork on display and for sale. Hunter St is within walking distance of Salamanca Place and historic Battery Point and close to the Hobart CBD, the Tasmanian Museum and Art Gallery, and just a step away from the Federation Concert Hall.
